Princeton helped me a lot to achieve my score. The online prep material provided is excellent and covers all the topics. Preparing with the mix of other students who were at Princeton was very helpful - with a relatively small class size, everyone is given attention and comparing your progress with others in the class also goes a long way, it was encouraging and at times even a reality check telling me that I needed to study harder. The teachers are well qualified and offered a lot of techniques - some of which were crucial to answering many questions on the GRE. The scheduled practice tests online are brilliant and very close to the actual GRE - performance on these practice tests will largely reflect how well you will ultimately do on the GRE. Princeton Review is the "secret" behind my success on the GRE!

Know What you're up against.

What's tested on the GRE?

Section	Content	Time	Points
Analytical Writing Assessment	2 essays	30 minutes each	Scored on a scale of 0-6 in half-point increments
Quantitative Section	2 twenty question sections	35 minutes each	130-170 scale in one-point increments
Verbal Section	2 twenty question sections	30 minutes each	130-170 scale in one-point increments
Experimental	Could be an additional quantitative or verbal section	30 or 35 minutes	Does not count towards your score

How does a Computer-Adaptive Test work?

The GRE is adaptive by section, which means that your performance on the first math or verbal sections will determine the difficulty level of the second math or verbal sections you see. In order to get the highest scores, you need to master the hardest questions. Within each section, the test is not adaptive. This allows you to skip difficult questions and return to them later, which is a huge advantage for well-coached test takers.
